In a pickle!

PICKLES WAS A HERO IN 1966.
He was the dog who found the World Cup! In 1966 the World Cup took place in England. The cup was stolen and the final match was going to be played without the cup. The police arrested a man, but they could not find the cup. A copy of the cup was made. A dog called Pickles found the cup in a bush in London. His owner received a reward of £5,000 for finding the cup.

My job as a traffic warden

By Mary Flemming

I love my job. I have been a traffic warden for seven years. Firstly, my job is to serve the public. Secondly, I keep the traffic flowing and issue parking tickets. Traffic wardens can also be the eyes and ears of the local police force.

Sometimes I meet some very angry people and I have to be careful how I deal with them. Now traffic wardens receive training on how to keep calm when people are losing their temper.

Finally, I know that there are many jokes about traffic wardens. You have to see the funny side of things when you are at work. In our town recently, a local vicar placed a sign outside his church that read 'Unlike some traffic wardens, God shows mercy'. That kind of notice does not help me to do my job.

I hope to be doing this type of work until I am sixty-five. It is a brilliant job for anyone who cares about their community.

Parking Tickets

Before you issue a penalty ticket, it is very important to check that the vehicle is parked illegally.

- A After you are certain that the vehicle is parked in a 'no parking' area, write out a ticket.
- B Secondly, look on the windscreen to see if a disabled ticket is displayed.
- C First, check that this vehicle does not have a special reason for being parked in a no parking area.
- D Finally, put the ticket in a plastic bag and secure it firmly to the front window of the vehicle, behind the windscreen wipers.
- E Sometimes you may have to talk to the driver of the vehicle. Always be polite but firm.

SPEED BUMPS

No one denies that speed bumps help to control traffic. Not only do they reduce traffic speed but they also cut the number of vehicles in the area of the bumps.

However, speed bumps are unpopular. They are a danger to cyclists and cause problems for emergency vehicles, which need to travel at speed.

Local residents complain about the extra squealing noise as drivers brake. Exhaust fumes fill the air as cars slow down and then speed up again. Bus services suffer and people taking children to school find it difficult.

While solving one problem, speed bumps create another difficulty somewhere else. The traffic simply moves to other streets and causes traffic jams there!

To control the speed and amount of traffic, local councils should look for new ideas. They must aim to reduce the number of drivers and improve public transport so that people travelling to work can do so easily, without using a car. Why build good roads, only to spoil them with bumps? It is far better to keep the roads clear for vital road users and to persuade other people to use the train or bus.
